

Free training:

Dealing with language barriers in refugee and asylum support work

Did you know?

- There are around 7000 languages spoken in the world today
- 80% of African languages have no written form
- Most people in the world are bilingual or multilingual

Do you work in refugee and asylum support?

This half-day workshop examines some key concepts and assumptions about language and communicating with diverse client groups.

Drawing on current research on language use, we cover a range of topics including: multilingualism, language fluency, literacy, linguistic discrimination and the impact of workplace norms on communication.

You will leave the workshop with an increased awareness of diversity in language, and some practical strategies to apply to your own work.

Please join us for this free interactive training session.
